

After the hay is sun-cured, the farmer gently rakes and rolls it into rows with stems turned out and the tender leaves turned in to save the food value.