

Crops must have water to grow . . . In some places not enough rain falls so farmers use MM engines and pump water from deep wells into ditches between crop rows. This is called irrigation.

